

The Porches of Ile d'Orleans: Seeing the Island through its Windows and Doors while Walking Chemin Royal

Debby Lee Jagerman-Dungan is one of the few who has walked the entire 42 miles of Chemin Royal on Ile d'Orleans, a small island near Quebec City, Canada. It is an island filled with over sixty food specialty shops, restaurants, boutiques, and galleries; a 350 year-old New France history, culture, religion, and architecture; over 600 historic buildings and monuments; and a picturesque scenery that makes her feel warm and welcome. This book is a collection of photographs of Debby's favorite subject when she travels - windows, doors, and now porches - on Ile d'Orleans, and has deepened her connection with an island with which she fell in love. This book is written in English and French, and contains over 100 photographs. The years of construction of many of the homes are also included, some dating back to the 17th, 18th, and 19th centuries.
