

The town of Steele Grove, Missouri sits high along the bluffs of the Mississippi River. Legends run rampant around town about crazy Blythe Fountain, the woman who discovered her beau hanging from the oak tree in the family's front yard. A short time later, two of her friends mysteriously vanished, never to be seen, or heard from again. Eighty years later, Ariel Fountain has inherited the property, and after catching her boyfriend cheating on her, decides she needs a change of scenery and runs headlong to a place shrouded in superstition and family mysteries which may be better off left unsolved. Ariel sets out with the help of a local man, Grady, to uncover the truth behind the hanging and the girl's disappearances. What Ariel discovers is a secret so horrific she wishes she would have left it buried.
