

Septimius Felton

Nathaniel Hawthorne was an American author that contributed significantly to the dark romanticism genre. Hawthorne was the great grandson of John Hathorne, one of the judges in the Salem witch trials. To hide the shame Nathaniel added the w to his last name. Many of Hawthorne's works are set in the New England area and feature the moral allegories found in the time of the Puritans. Septimius Felton is an unfinished gothic romance. Septimius tried to create an elixir of life from some old Indian recipes his aunt had.
